HISTORY

The G. Fox & Co. Building is significant for its architecture and downtown Hartford history. This retail establishment, founded in 1847 by Gerson Fox, grew to become the city's largest department store in the twentieth century. Gerson's son, Moses, hired noted New York architect, Cass Gilbert (1858-1934), to rebuild the store on a grand scale after a devastating fire. The eleven story, steel frame and masonry structure on Main Street was completed in 1918. Ornate architectural features of this Neo-Classical Revival style building include monumental Corinthian order marble columns and pilasters.
